

Joan Davis Nagel, M.D., M.P.H., joined the Office of Research in Women's Health in March 2009 and serves as Program Director, Interdisciplinary Research Programs. She is the Program Director for the Building Interdisciplinary Research Careers in Women's Health (BIRCWH), K12 Career Development Program. Currently, there are 26 BIRCWH Programs across the U.S. Dr. Nagel earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in biology from Williams College, a medical degree from State University of New York at Buffalo, School of Biomedical Sciences and a Masters in Public Health Degree from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. Her background includes training in ob-gyn followed by a residency in General Preventive Medicine. She completed her residency in Preventive Medicine at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions, Baltimore, Maryland. Before assuming her current role, she was Medical Officer in NICHD directing the BIRCWH Program, the NICHD Contraception and Infertility Research Loan Repayment Program and she served as a project team leader for the Roadmap K12 Multidisciplinary Clinical Research career Development Program. Prior to coming to the NIH, Dr. Nagel worked as a City Clinician for the New York City Department of Health (NYCDOH), Bureau of Sexually Transmitted Diseases and as a Medical Consultant for the Urban Women's Retreat, a shelter for survivors of domestic violence in Harlem, New York.