David Putrino, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor of Rehabilitation and Human Performance

Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai

David Putrino (he/him) is a physical therapist with a Ph.D. in neuroscience. He worked as a clinician in Australia before moving to the United States to study computational neuroscience at Harvard Medical School, MIT, and NYU. He has served as a faculty member at Weill-Cornell Medicine and Burke Medical Research Institute. He is currently the Director of Rehabilitation Innovation for the Mount Sinai Health System, and an Assistant Professor of Rehabilitation and Human Performance at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai.

Mr. Putrino works to develop innovative technology solutions for individuals in need of better health care accessibility. He consults with the Red Bull High Performance division and the Brooklyn Nets National Basketball Association team to use evidence-based technologies to improve athletic performance. He is also the "Chief Mad Scientist" of Not Impossible Labs, a group that crowdsources accessible technological solutions for high-impact humanitarian problems. His research has been featured on ABC, Sports Illustrated, the Wall Street Journal, the BBC, Time Magazine, TEDx, Wired, and the New York Times to name just a few. He is the author of Hacking Health: How to make money and save lives in the HealthTech world, which is available from Amazon and Springer-Nature. In 2019, Mr. Putrino was named "Global Australian of the Year" for his contributions to healthcare.