

National Institutes of Health
Turning Discovery Into Health

NIH Women's Health Roundtable Series

Endometriosis | Beyond the Lesion: Charting New Paths

August 19, 2024, 1:00 p.m. – 2:30 p.m. EDT

Join the Office of Research on Women's Health (ORWH) for Beyond the Lesion: Charting New Paths, the second event of the NIH Women's Health Roundtable Series. This series focuses on important women's health topics, such as endometriosis, as part of the White House Women's Health Research Initiative. It was developed as a recommended action in response to the Presidential Memorandum to bring attention to priority topics within the Department of Health and Human Services and to disseminate information on federally supported research areas.

This roundtable is co-hosted by ORWH and the Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development. The goal of the endometriosis roundtable is to bring together diverse stakeholders, including researchers, clinicians, and community members to foster collaborative discussions and share insights on the latest developments in endometriosis research, diagnosis, and treatment. This collaborative effort aims to identify key challenges and develop strategies to improve patient care.

For event updates, please visit the ORWH event page

